Issue: The proliferation of Refugee Crises and Increasing and Increasing the Precaution to Intervene with

Country: Norway

Delegate: -----

The problem of refugees around the world is a crucial issue that burdens to all member states. As we thrive to make them live a better life, we want to see them enjoy what life can offer. Because of many different reasons, the 21st century, the number of refugees is high and increasing all the time. In Asia, there are more than half of the world's refugees, while Africa has around 20%. Refugees live in a variety of conditions, some live in well-established camps and collective centers to makeshift shelters or living in the open.

If we don't help the refugees, drastic effects will ripple through member states. During the Syrian uprising, for instance, more than 80,000 people lost their lives, millions became displaced and more are in their way to be so. When a conflict from that type occurs, millions of people get internally displaced and millions are forced to leave their countries for the sake of humanitarian assistance. At that stage, many global issues start to emerge to the surface striking and threatening the stability of many countries around the world. Issues like abuse, diseases, organized crime and even more conflicts and more complicated problems between countries strike immediately with the increase in the numbers of refugees around the world.

We, Norway, dedicated ourselves to cooperate with other member states to help solve this Issue. The government donated a total of 5,475,452 million dollars to fund the Syrian refugees' needs last year as one step from our side to end the suffering of these people in addition to our financial support to other many displaced people around the world. Norway is desired destination for displaced people for the services and help provided by the government to them. An official reports show that asylum-seekers increased by 72% in 2012 compared to 2011.

The Kingdom of Norway is committed to work collaboratively with all member states to find sustainable solutions for this issue. We recommend that immediate discussions get held to reach world-wide resolution(s) in the best way to help refugees. We call for the establishment of international bodies that work towards offering appropriate conditions in the refugees camps around the world. We also call for an effective involvement of the UN with all its operative bodies to do their best to put an end to any emerging conflict that might result in increasing the number of refugees around the world. We also suggest encouraging and helping NGOs to put more effort towards decreasing the effects of this issues on the global context. We, hereby, declare our readiness and commitment to work with any member state that seeks a solution to the issue under the umbrella of the UN or on the level of diplomatic representations.
